hlp.

*...xcept for the part where they jst started ltng me walk to the bathroom by myself 2day.

eta: sorry. i know everybody means well, but please not to hover/fret/offer 2 send food? makes me nervous right now. also, meds make me feel like puking mostly.

:-P.

sorry, sorry. bad sport. i know. sorry.

When a friend of mine was in chemo she used to get a particularly solicitous minister come to visit. He'd been sicced on her by a family member, I think.

One day while I was out of the room getting some phone call stuff sorted, he came in.

As she said to me, "Did you know that almost any hospital pest can be gotten rid of by threatening to hurl on their shoes? It's like hairballs for humans."

 cvillette

June 8 2008, 02:03:00 UTC    COLLAPSE

wonder if it works on nurses w/needles....

 saoba

June 10 2008, 06:24:03 UTC    COLLAPSE

I'm guessing that's part of what nurses go to school to learn- the steely resolve not to flee in the face of hairball threats.

I seem to remember an excellent moment of Season 2 of Feasting on Asphalt, where Alton made one of the production members dress up in a chicken suit and wave to passersby.... PRICELESS.

It's not just about the food. ;) Just make sure to look away from the TV during the segment on Kool Aid Pickles...

Not to gloat, but DH made bbq yesterday. 8 hours with the smoker and boston butts. Sauce was made Thursday. We (for multiple values of us) ate today. Nom nom nom. Hopefully you'll be out of hospital and off meds so you can feel like eating fairly soon.
